A Natural Remedy

Time was when disease was thought to be due to the direct influence of evil spirits, and exorcism and magic were invoked to cast it out. Science has taught us wisdom. The evil spirits exist still. We call them "Disease Germs," and they also must be cast out. Once lodged in the stomach or intestines, fever with its hallucinations, or biliousness with its aches and pains, is the result.

ENO'S FRUIT SALT

is the approved remedy for driving out disease germs. Its action is quick and thorough. It clears the intestines, rouses the torpid liver to new life, stimulates the mucous membrane to a healthy action, and cleanses and invigorates the whole digestive tract.

It may be safely taken at any time by young or old.

It is very effective in the early stage of Diarrhoea by removing the irritating cause.

Be prepared for emergencies by always keeping a bottle in the house.

Prepared only by

Dear Sirs,I might say that I have been a regular smoker of your Glasgow Mixture for the last twelve years, and I might also say that I cannot findany tobacco to suit me like it. In my opinion if Golf Players would smoke your famous Glasgow Mixture they would find it very soothing to the Nerves, as I am sure I do when having to play strenuous Golf

THE OTHER HERO.

"What are you looking at?"

A portrait of one of the new V.C.'s I knew him.Barrow passed the paper to his friend, who looked at the photograph.

"A bright face," he said.

"Yes," replied Barrow. "Jim—this one—and his brother they called Jimmie—was, you know, I knew them when they could only scramble in the stock yard, think I must go down and see the old people again."He looked out into the quiet square, dreading. The London trees became the sue of the country, and the pavement was the courtyard of the old homestead: bare on the right hand side, where every one walks, decked with wall-flowers and willowherb on the left where no one walks.
Why it should be so, none can tell. Habit is made by the place itself.

"Yes, I must go down," said Barrow.

II.

The courtyard was as he had seen it in his waking dream, blue and gold in the sunlight after a thunder-shower. There was a house at the end of the road, the old house, and at the foot of the ladder, a bare on the right hand side, where every one walks, decked with wall-flowers and
willowherb on the left where no one walks.
Why it should be so, none can tell. Habit is made by the place itself.The clock gave its warning—startling in the stillness of the house.As though by magic the place was suddenly alive again. The music of the clock was followed by other music. Clang! It was milk pail on the stone floor of the kitchen.
Clang! Another pail. Then a man's deep voice, then a scuffling noise of the pail being lifted, steps going down to the dairy.
Then the shrill scream of the separator, muffled by two heavy doors. Barrow walked into the kitchen."Well!" exclaimed Mrs. Ramsden; "well, there! Come in, Mr. Barrow.
Come in, Mr. Barrow. Now, however, it has outgrown its original quarters, and a new building has been erected on a conspicuous site, the gift of Mr. George Cadbury, where, thanks to the generous support of a number of friends, it will be possible greatly to enlarge the scope of the work. Resident students to the number of about thirty are provided for.""Our teaching," says Mr. Archibald,
"is based upon a study of the psychology
of the child in its gradual development.
We teach the old truths, but in a new
way. The great thing is to encourage the child to express itself. We do not attempt to stereotype individuality. Thereare many ways in which this self-expression can be developed and moulded. For infants, sand, plasticine, blocks, and other such media are largely employed, and manual exercises enter into the training of the growing boys and girls.""The spirit of a child is wonderfully sensitive to the best music, the finest pictures, and the noblest poetry when they are interpreted by those who teach
not as a stern duty, but with the heart of a child.""The new training college, which will soon be opened, is able to draw upon the scholarly resources of Woodbrooke Settlement, in association with which it is to be conducted."

THE DANUBE

The Danube is once more in the public mind as the river of map-conquerors. None of it, however, is Turkish now, and the point has been removed from the verses of an obscure poet which were repeated by Dr. Johnson to a friend during a drive at B.ighton.See how the wandering Danube flows,
A river and religious parting;
A friend to all true Christian foes,
To Peter, Paul, and Martin.New Testament and Pagan now,
Not constant long to disabuse,
At length an infidel does grow,
And ends his journey neither.Thus many a youth I've known set out, Half Protestant, half Papist,
And rambling long the world about Till infidel or atheist.LESSON FOR THE GERMAN NAVY.British Seamen and Their Beaten Foes.Sir Henry Lucy, the well-known journalist, has been privileged to see a home letter, not yet published, from an officer on board one of the British destroyers that avenged the torpedoing of the Recruit by sinking the two German boats responsible for the action. After a modest but graphic account of the chase, the capture and destruction of the enemy submarine, the writer adds a passage which brings into strong light the different manner and method of British seamen towards a beaten foe."After five minutes of concentrated fire," he writes, "one boat sank with a loud bang. The other burst into flames for seconds. We ceased fire, and closed to pick up survivors. There were none on board the remaining boat, but about a mile and a half astern we came across the crew in the water. We picked up 48 all told, of whom five died from exhaustion. One had bullet wounds on his arm, showing he had been shot on his own ship. (With characteristic diligency the British officer refrained from commenting on this gruesome incident and its obvious cause.) We picked up an officer and 12 men in the last stage of collapse.
But they recovered except in the case of one man. The officer, lying in the morning glide me that when they found the game was up they ordered their men overboard, and attempted, unsuccessfully, to blow their ship up.""Our men were like children as soon as it was all over. They were the Germans their clothes, gave them tea, eggs, bacon, and cigarettes. They did everything they could to make them get over the shock.
While we were picking up the blighted first lieutenant, seeing a German officer in the water, just on the point of drowning, he went in after him and rescued him. One German sailor hauled on board said 'It's a shame to pick up only to shoot us later.'" An officer refused to take a drink until a doctor had tasted it. He thought it might contain poison. When the first lieutenant visited one of the sailed, made comfortable on the nurse deck, lying on a locker, wrapped in blankets, and asked him how he was getting on, he put out his tongue, and made a rude remark. Five minutes later he had a attack of ague, and the doctor suggested he should be taken to the engine-room to be thoroughly warmed. So four of our sailors lifted him up and carried him off.
As soon as he appeared on the upper deck he yelled, cried, and fought like a maniac.
He thought we were going to throw him overboard for having been impertinent."

CROSSING THE BAR.

Barrow's little poem, Crossing the Bar, has been much criticised for its faulty imagery on the ground that at the moment when the speaker "meets his Pilot face to face," he would have no more use for him, but might have needed him badly before. A gentleman who inserts a memorandum notice in the "Englishman" (Calcutta) avoids all such vagueness and uncertainty. He inserts the notice "in sad and fond memory of my dear wife, Elizabeth Marie (Dewie), who dropped her pilot and sailed for the Great Beyond August 15, 1914—Mizpah." This is decidedly more nautical, but evidently refers to another pilot—apparently the bereaved husband.

SUNDAY SCHOOLS.

New Aims and Methods in Religious Training.The scope of a new institution at Mirningham which aims at nothing less than a revolution in the Sunday School was explained to a representative of the "Daily News" by Mr. G. Hamilton Archibald, who came over from Canada some ten years ago as the apostle of a new era in the religious training of the young.Mr. Archibald has many disciples in all the churches, and for eight years past an undenominational institution has been hard at work under his direction equipping teachers who have gone out as missionaries of the new system. This institution was housed at West Hill, Selly Oak, given for the purpose by Mr. and Mrs. Barrow Cadbury. Now, however, it has outgrown its original quarters, and a new building has been erected on a conspicuous site, the gift of Mr. George Cadbury, where, thanks to the generous support of a number of friends, it will be possible greatly to enlarge the scope of the work. Resident students to the number of about thirty are provided for.""Our teaching," says Mr. Archibald,
"is based upon a study of the psychology
of the child in its gradual development.
We teach the old truths, but in a new
way. The great thing is to encourage the child to express itself. We do not attempt to stereotype individuality. Thereare many ways in which this self-expression can be developed and moulded. For infants, sand, plasticine, blocks, and
other such media are largely employed,
and manual exercises enter into the training of the growing boys and girls.""The spirit of a child is wonderfully sensitive to the best music, the finest
pictures, and the noblest poetry when they are interpreted by those who teach
not as a stern duty, but with the heart of a child.""The new training college, which will soon be opened, is able to draw upon
the scholarly resources of Woodbrooke
Settlement, in association with which it is to be conducted."THE

GERMAN AND HIS NEW GUINEA BABOON INTERFERED.

The nations may rage fiercely together and battle clouds hang over fair countries like a pall, but the Zoo provides pleasure for all. For the children it is a wonderland, where they can see lions, tigers, bears, elephants, snakes, and beautiful birds, which, in the imagination of childhood, have hitherto only inhabited playground jungles.

Now it is only the pleasureland of the children and their elders: it is now a haven for sick and wounded soldiers, a place where they can forget recent sufferings and dangers and enjoy the gentle sun of autumn days. The long blue gowans and reds are common in the gardens; only less so than the kind of simple soldiers who have come from overseas.

Life flows on placidly at the Zoo, and if the animals and birds have been quick to know—at some of the keepers have gone to war, they have not found the Belgian refugees who have filled the vacancies less attentive.

To be quite candid, though, some of the Zoo community could afford to be more independent, these days. As a couple of old black bears, with shy winks and knowing twirls of their shaggy heads, condescended to look at the new arrivals, the baboon, it is known, was always up to tricks, and was a perpetual object of suspicion. When the war broke out the German made his arrangements, and, speaking generally, felt himself to be very comfortable, extolling the privileges enjoyed by an easy-going Government. Then one day people decided that the Government should be easy-going no longer, so the German was interned, and his baboon was sent to the Zoo.

The baboon is not exhibited just now, but confined to the authorities, and all his new arrivals to the Gardens. He looked very sober and subdued.

In the next cage to that of the interned "allied" are two young Orang Outangs which have just been brought from Borneo by a British officer. It is not yet known whether Mr. and Mrs. Outang are making the Gardens their permanent home. Mrs. Outang looked the reverse of enthusiastic, but possibly it was her neighbour she did not like.

Other recent additions to this rather exclusive society circle are five bears, the mascot of various Canadian battalions, and four Indian elk, the mascots of one of the Warwickshire regiments. There is no doubt that the average person's knowledge of geography has increased owing to the many spheres of war, and this fact seems to be reflected in Zoo conversation. For it is a common experience to overhear references to this animal and that bird as having come from countries closely associated with the war.

idea for me! Thank you," said the Emperor. He walked a few yards away to a small improvised cemetery, where he had buried our dead that morning, and taking his helmet off, he placed one flower on each grave, whilst the men stood around with caps off and heads bent.

"After saying this tribute to the dead he turned to the captain, saying: "Please communicate this event to the parents or families of the men buried here."

"When visiting the hospitals he always carries flowers with him, and gives them to the wounded. In a Galician base hospital a young soldier was about to return to the front again, recovering from a slight wound, when the Emperor came. "Would you like to get home for a while, my boy?" he asked, and then gave the order "Give him three weeks' leave."

"I once saw him looking at a tired transport of Russian prisoners. He stopped the column and approached the prisoners. An interpreter was directed to ask them if they knew who he (the Emperor) was. The men looked at him and said: "German General." Not one of them recognized the Emperor. When this was made clear to the Emperor he waved his arm and said, "Take them away."

CARRIED BY A NURSE.
How An English Girl Saved A Wounded Soldier.

The correspondent of the Algemeen Handelsblad, in a letter "from the English front," tells the following story of an English nurse:

"After the terrible life at the front I was now far from trenches and I was walking along a stony road when, rounding a curve, I suddenly saw a bent figure slowly moving forward. It was a girl of not more than 23 years of age, carrying on her shoulder a young English infantryman. The young man had been shot through the shoulder, and after a preliminary dressing of the wound had been told to go to the nearest field hospital. But, taking a wrong turning, he had lost his way, and had wandered on along lanes and by paths until he collapsed and fainted."

"In this state the young woman—to was an English nurse—accidentally found him. As it was at least half an hour's walk to the nearest field hospital she decided to carry him there. The brave and resolute girl readily accepted my assistance. We utilized my overcoat as a stretcher, and thus we carried our wounded man together to the hospital. After receiving a satisfactory report from the doctor the young girl proceeded once more on her walk."

THEATRICAL KAISER.
German Emperor Among His Troops.

An officer who has just returned from the Eastern front, and who has had occasion to see the German Emperor more than once among the soldiers there, gives me an interesting description of the theatrical ways and manners the Emperor William adopts, when visiting his men in the field. He greets them invariably with the words "Good morning, men," or "Go day, men," and the troops answer, "Good day, Majesty." He often stops to talk to men who have some decorations, and they have to relate the circumstances under which they were gained.

"I saw him in Galicia once. The men were just having their supper when his car drew up. We jumped to our feet, but he bade us stay.

"I don't trouble on my account. Just go on with your supper. I am very hungry, and only want some of myself." An officer handed him his dish and a spoon, the Emperor sat on the step of the car, and seemed to enjoy what he ate. A private near asked the Emperor, "Does your Majesty like it?" "I like anything soldiers like," he answered, and seemed pleased to have been given an opportunity to say so.

FLOWERS OF THE BATTLEFIELD.
In Russian Poland not long ago he arrived after a great battle, and one of the officers gave him a bouquet of flowers. "Is though too late, that he has spoiled the child; but when this conviction, with its dire consequences, is borne home to his mind, he wisely takes steps to remedy the evil, without awakening the consciousness and potential opposition of the victim. Those responsible for Government must, to-day, without delay, take corresponding action to rectify the baneful influences of the recent past, and we see in the National Register a means to this end. What is needed on the part of all, and in the interests of all, is a determination by the Government to make everyone feel that on each individual rests the duty of utilising his physical or mental qualities to accomplish his share of the work which must now be carried out without loss of time. The registration paper enables the Government to ascertain the number of men of military age, and at the same time to divide up those engaged upon an capable of undertaking work to feed the fighting forces with all the requisites of warfare at home and abroad. It will then be possible to allocate to each the work he is capable of accomplishing, and to line up all who, by reason of their physical fitness and their inability to carry on the industries of the country, ought to be trained for the fighting line. All this must be accomplished by compulsory edict. The time has passed for voluntary action.

The above is the burden of a tirade which, in our opinion, is conspicuous chiefly for its ingrained party prejudice. If compulsion is necessary, let Lord Kitchener announce the fact, clearly. If the voluntary system is inadequate in the present great emergency no member of the Cabinet—no matter what his views may long have been regarding the merits or demerits of compulsion, and voluntarism—will hesitate to act according to the best interests of the country. Such party rancour as is revealed in the above and the personalities shown in the so-called "Conspiracy against the Cabinet," which, according to Reuters, is "made a feature" by a London contemporary, are deplorable at the present time when party politics are unavailing. It is sane patriotism, not political rivalry, that the country demands from its political leaders, and the sooner the better for all concerned that such views should be comprehended both in and out of Parliament.

Whether a Cabinet more suited to the needs of the hour could be formed by the exclusion of Mr. Asquith, Sir Edward Grey and Mr. Balfour, of whom have rendered excellent service to the country—is at least debatable. To most people—to those at least not obsessed by party rancour—the substitution of any two of these illustrious statesmen in place of Sir E. Carson and Lord Curzon, will appear at least ludicrous. Party intrigues might welcome such a change, but emphatically the country and the Empire will denounce it. If compulsion is necessary, let the country, as a whole, learn of it soon enough from Mr. Asquith, Sir E. Grey and Mr. Balfour, in whom they have implicit trust.

QUEEN'S COLLEGE CLUB.

NEW PAVILION OPENED.

Mr. E. A. Irving, the Director of Education, last evening declared open the new up-to-date pavilion at the Queen's College Recreation Club.

Those present included Mr. T. K. Denly, Headmaster of Queen's College; Mr. R. E. Bellis, R. Ralph, A. W. Grant, B. James, A. Orlanston (a visitor from New Zealand), H. R. Wells, J. Ralston, and other members of the College staff, Major Humphreys, R.E., and numerous Chinese residents.

In the opening speech the Headmaster said:—
The compact little building in front of which we are standing, owes its existence to the activity of the Queen's College Games Committee—a body which was called into existence, about three years ago, for the better control of our games.

For many years, I had personally watched the slow but unmistakable growth of a liking for games among our scholars. I clearly recall that the first of middle school boys, who were still hired and thrived in the old Central School—the site of which is now occupied by the Bellis Public Girls' School—there was positively not a single square inch of play ground for the scholars.

It is difficult in these stress-stricken days, to realise what that really means. At recess the crowded class rooms simply flowed out into the passages and corridors, and into the neighbouring streets, nothing else was possible. No games of any kind were ever played. Strangest fact of all, no scholars apparently wanted to play games: violent effort of any kind seemed to be looked upon as undignified. When we migrated to our present roomy premises, it is no exaggeration to say, that boys had to be taught, by easy stages, how to make use of the play grounds. And it was quite a perceptible time—years in fact—before they could be seen making free and legitimate use of the playing areas. It is, however, only in quite recent times that games have been organised. One of the last things that our former head master did, was to get the P.W.D. to lay down a Tennis Court in the Quadrangle. During the past five years, things athletic have moved with surprising and irresistible rapidity.

As I said earlier, some three years ago, a Games Committee was formed, of which, you, Sir, were the Hon. Chairman. At Queen's College, the restricted size of the play grounds only permits of certain games being properly played—Badminton, Tennis, Cricket, at both on two cemented pitches, and Volley Ball. First, the Committee are to come later. Football, a game in which our boys take a peculiar interest, needs larger space than we have at the College. It was at this juncture, that the Government, ever willing to listen to appeals for aid, promised that this particular site should be levelled and assigned to Queen's College for games. Then, some one happily suggested, that as outdoor games were becoming increasingly popular, a Games Pavilion should be erected on the site, to provide players with an opportunity for a change as well as a limited space for interested spectators. The idea was no sooner mooted, than it was quickly carried a step further, and two members of the Committee drafted an Appeal for Funds. This was printed in both Chinese and English, and circulated far and wide among scholars past and present, as well as among others interested in our well being. The appeal was not in vain: and by the middle of last year, it was deemed time to proceed still further. Government was again approached, and our great opponent, the expert professional services of Mr. Carpenter of the P.W.D. were loaned to us. The pleasing result is now before your eyes. We are the proud owners of a Games Pavilion, that in the simplicity and charm of its design is second to none in the Colony. The Hon. Governor, Mr. Ah Fong, is an old scholar of Queen's College. He is to be congratulated on what, I am told, is actually his first completed building. The flagstaff that proudly bears aloft the school colours is the generous gift of Mr. E. Bellis, a great patron of very many matters other than sports.

To Mr. Tutcher, the Superintendent of the Botanical and Forestry Department, we are indebted for the laying of the fine turf in the immediate front of the Pavilion, as well as for the ornamental palm fence at each end, and decorative pot plant.

The individual members of the Games Committee, without exception, have all given ungrudgingly of their spare moments to the many and worrying details of the scheme, and in this connection, I should like specially to mention the names of Mr. Grant and Mr. Edwards. The boys themselves, as though in evidence of appreciation of what has been done for them, have this year given a very convincing proof of their interest and ability in athletics; and, at the present moment, on exhibition from the Head Master's Office, there are in the Pavilion, trophies for Swimming, Volley Ball and Football. At the recent meeting of the Amateur Athletic Federation, the V.R.C. has secured a good swimmer, thanks to the careful coaching of Mr. Johnston, carried off the very great majority of prizes.

The whole area outside the football ground, it may be noticed, has sufficient space for several tennis courts, and the Committee have a lively hope, that after the war, Government may help them to lay out and turf this section of the lot.

On behalf of the Committee, I desire to thank each and all of those generous donors who have enabled us to become this happy possessor of this delightful little Games Pavilion.

The Director of Education spoke of the pleasure it gave him to do that duty because, as far as he knew it was the first occasion on which Hongkong Schools had followed the Schools at Home in providing their own pavilion. The College boys had deprived themselves of luxuries to a degree and had subscribed to a common fund which had bought this charming Pavilion. Mr. Carpenter, the architect, and the old boys who had been the school's devoted special thanks. What they have done was without going in aid to the Government and he thought such a spirit of independence should be encouraged. Locally, independence was a notable fact in the Chinese character which had a pleasing monument in that Pavilion.

At the conclusion the Director of Education accepted a handsomely engraved silver key, with which he declared the new building open.

FUTILE GERMAN ATTACKS IN ARTOIS: VIOLENT BOMBARDMENTS IN CHAMPAGNE.A SO-CALLED CONSPIRACY AGAINST THE CABINET.

(Reuters Service to the China Mail.)

THE OFFER OF CYPRUS TO GREECE

London, Oct. 22.
The Times says it was understood yesterday evening in well-informed quarters that Greece had rejected the offer of Cyprus.

FUTILE GERMAN ATTACKS AND CANNONADING.

Paris, Oct. 22.
Two further futile German attacks in Artois and references to most violent bombardments in Champagne are features of a communique just issued.

The Germans are particularly commending the districts of Tabora and Mesnil. French guns responded with blanketing fire, which was observed to be most effective against the German batteries and trenches.

A "CONSPIRACY AGAINST THE CABINET."

London, Oct. 22.
The Daily Chronicle makes a feature of what it calls a "conspiracy against the Cabinet," which, it is stated, is aiming at the expulsion of Mr. Asquith, Sir Edward Grey, and Mr. Balfour and the inclusion of Sir E. Carson, Lord Milner, and Mr. Lloyd George and Mr. Churchill the only Liberal members thereof with Lord Curzon as Foreign Secretary.

The journal says that the position of Mr. Lloyd George, in wimpulling is peculiar, as he is most loyal to Mr. Asquith; but he is also a strong believer in Conscription. He made two most significant appointments this week—Sir Chichester Money to be his Parliamentary Secretary and Mr. Arthur Lee as Military Secretary to the Ministry of Munitions. Both appointments are strong conscriptionists.
